

THE 988 IMPLEMENTATION ACT

Someone to Call, Someone to Come and Somewhere to Go

THE PROBLEM:

Without a robust mental health crisis care continuum, Americans are forced to call the police or go to hospital emergency rooms when experiencing a mental health or substance use crisis. In July 2022, the national 3-digit calling code, 9-8-8, went live to respond to mental health emergencies. This was a huge step in our ability to treat mental health crises, but states still need continued support to effectively respond to callers in crisis.

THE SOLUTION:

The 988 Implementation Act, introduced by Congressman Tony Cárdenas (D-CA), provides federal funding and guidance for states to implement their 988 and crisis response infrastructure that relies on trained mental health specialists instead of armed law enforcement. This legislation is also being led by Members of Congress: Brian Fitzpatrick (R-PA), Lisa Blunt Rochester (D-DE), Seth Moulton (D-MA), Grace Napolitano (D-CA), Doris Matsui (D-CA), Jamie Raskin (D-MD), and Don Beyer (D-VA).

THE DEEP DIVE:

Evidence shows us that, to be truly effective, crisis services must operate in a linked fashion. There must be someone to call, someone to come and somewhere to go if you need it. The 988 Implementation Act provides federal support and funding for states to enact 988 and crisis services, to ensure that it's not just a number you call but a resource to connect you to services on the ground, including trained first responders and crisis centers when needed.

The bill:

- ◆ Solidifies funding for 9-8-8 regional and local call centers to ensure 24/7 access.
- ◆ Provides funding for community-based crisis response, including mobile crisis teams and crisis centers.
- ◆ Supports crisis workforce development with increased funding for training and scholarship opportunities.
- ◆ Increases access to care by requiring all health insurance plans to cover crisis services.
- ◆ Implements a national suicide prevention awareness campaign in partnership with a wide array of stakeholders.
